Epidemic hit Sandusky in 1849

By Bob Carter

Sandusky was always viewed as a busy port and business center. Two railroads and hundreds of ships docked there. It was one of the commerce centers of northern Ohio.

Passenger and freight increased every year until the summer of 1849. Suddenly all that ground to a virtual halt.

A cholera epidemic hit in late June and lasted thru July and August. It was estimated that over 400 people died that summer. An accurate figure may never be known.

The town, with a population of 5,000, saw half (some believe closer to 2/3) of the population flee to other areas. Many were not welcome and, in some cases, were turned away. Some never returned, some became orphans and businesses ground to a halt. The situation struck fear beyond imagination.

The editor of the Daily Sanduskian commented, "This shutting up and flying has a bad effect at home and must be disastrous abroad. It creates unnecessary panic among those we leave, and we should think the deserters would be unwelcome visitors where they go."

"At the onset the city had seven doctors. Two died, two left town and the remaining three were worked to exhaustion. Help came when two doctors arrived from Cleveland and later two more from Mansfield. It was difficult to find laborers to dig graves and on the weekend of July 28 and 29, seventy people were buried. Earlier in the week fifty more had been buried. Most were buried in mass graves in what became known as the "Cholera Cemetery."

The newspapers published quack cures, from burning sulfur to exploding gunpowder in the streets to purify the air. One cure, due to a misprint, was down right poison. Sandusky was in an unbelieveable panic. Freight ground to a halt on the SM&N railroad and what passengers were arriving, went straight on board of boats who departed as quickly as possible.

But the sought after end of the epidemic is found in the Aug. 20, 1849, issue of the Sandusky paper, "We again hear the sound of the caulker's hammer and the sailors cheerful voice, as they re-rig the vessels laid up during the prevalence of the cholera. The rumbling of other wheels than the dead cart and other voices than those of lamentation, break upon our ears.

"Travel upon the railroads, has vastly increased the past few days, cars and steamers come and go, freighted with heavy loads of merchandise for the prosecution of active fall trade."

"Produce which was in store, has mostly shipped abroad, and leaves the market bare. Wheat, however, may be quoted at 93 cents a bushel from teams and 95 cents on board. We hear of 1,000 bushels of corn at 44 cents, although we hear that the best would command 48 cents on board. Flour – none in market, no activity in other articles."

("Teams" means arriving by wagon; and "on board" is loaded on the ship).

Simple Tomato Sauce

Wondering what to do with all those tomatoes that will be ripening on your vines soon? Or do you just want a fresh idea for a quick sauce for your pasta?

Our original recipe calls for canned tomatoes, which you can still use, but here we are going to convert it to fresh tomatoes.

Cut all your tomatoes, season with olive oil, salt and pepper and toss them in a roasting pan. Make sure and add some garlic and if you have some Stock + Spice Tuscan seasoning that would be the perfect blend to sprinkle on top, if not use some Italian Seasoning.

Roast tomatoes in a 350 degree oven until they begin to get a bit crispy, at least 40–50 minutes. The tomato skins should be a little bit blackened. Transfer tomatoes to a blender or bowl (use immersion blender) but be careful with hot liquid. Blend and pour over your favorite plain pasta, ravioli or gnocchi.

Let's talk about the one thing that everyone wants to blame for their weight gain but no one wants to control. That's right, carbohydrates, the macro that gets the bad rap. Yes, it is the one macro that can sabotage you, but it is also one that we need for energy.

There are good carbs and there are some not-so-good carbs, then there are totally bad carbs. It is important not to lump them all together as bad and cut carbs altogether.

Yes, there are diets that totally cut carbs and yes, you can lose weight with them, but ask yourself is it a lifestyle you can sustain? If not, then it is temporary, and yo-yo dieting can destroy your metabolism.

Carbohydrates are our main source of energy. Let me share some other reasons why you should not totally cut your carbs.

They fuel our brain, kidneys, heart muscles and central nervous system. The fiber we find in carbohydrates help our digestion, helps us feel fuller longer and also keeps blood cholesterol in check.

So, as you can see, we should not 100% cut our carbs. It's important to fuel our bodies with the right carbs and our body will work for us not against us.

Let's start with the bad carbs — food like cookies, chips, breads, ice cream, most cereals to name a few. Cutting these bad carbs will be a good thing for your body and weight loss.

Next, our not-so-bad carbs — rice, corn, potatoes, squash, sweet potatoes, beans and any fruit that's not a berry. When you are eating these, remember to eat them in moderation and not to pair two of them in the same meal. For ladies, limit to a half cup and for men, a full cup.

Finally, our good carbs — vegetables (except corn), any berries, grapefruit and apricots. You can have 2–3 servings of these nutrition packed carbohydrates with lean protein and get amazing weight loss results.

For my readers that work out a lot, it is important to fuel your muscles. A great meal example is 3–5 oz of lean protein, half cup of cooked rice and one cup of vegetables.

I hope I have helped you have a better relationship with your carbs and in the future you can use them for the good food sources they are, but remember to stay away from the ones that sabotage you.

Second annual Family Fun on the Farm Festival is Saturday

We continue to live in times where food supplies may be compromised. The events of the last few years have brought attention to and awareness of where food comes from, and an emphasis on locally produced food.

To continue to raise awareness on where food comes from, Richland Soil and Water Conservation District (Richland SWCD) is teaming up with Richland County's favorite public farm, Malabar Farm State Park, to sponsor Family Fun on the Farm Festival Saturday, June 25 at Malabar Farm from 2–6 pm. The festival is open to the public and admission is free. There are many fun activities planned to celebrate summer's bounty of garden grown food, especially for children.

Children are invited to make seed bombs, plant green beans in a recycled egg carton, build a greenhouse in a bag, and learn how to save seeds. They will get to watch seedlings grow and enjoy their own fresh green beans this summer.

There will be interactive weaving for children with something to take home and young children can let their imaginations run wild at the Imagination Stations.

Families will have the opportunity to visit with alpacas and farm animals; walk through history with antique farm equipment, try out archery; and fish at the pond by the Big House. Fishing is free for those 15 years-old and younger.

The agriculture and conservation trivia wheel offers a chance to win prizes. The festival also allows for slower paced activities such as story time for children, a relaxing ride on the farm wagon and live music.

Food trucks and vendors will have tasty treats and beverages for sale. There will also be a variety of fresh food items for sale like micro greens, herb and vegetable plants and honey.

While at the festival, connect with other Family Fun on the Farm participants Buehler's Food Truck, CaliFarmer, Jonny Ohio Music, Little Buckeye Children's Museum, Mansfield/Richland County Public Library, NECIC, Ohio Bird Sanctuary, Ohio Department of Natural Resources-Div. of Wildlife, Richland County Emergency Management Agency, Richland County Farm Bureau, Richland Public Health, Shady Lane Farm, the Buckeye Iron Will Club, OSU Extension-Richland County 4-H, Richland County Area Beekeepers Association, Bloom Haven Farm, The Roaming Donut, YWCA CCR&R, Paul & Kimberly Ault, Lionheart Medicinal Gardens, Chocolates and More, Exclusively Yours, Food Tour, Fiberarts Guild at Malabar Farm, High Desert Greens, Kingwood Center Gardens, Richland County Solid Waste, Richland Newhope/Richland County Board of Developmental Disabilities, and Westfield Tropical Sno.

Scavenger hunt returns to Mansfield July 1–August 5

Back by popular demand, the Downtown Mansfield Scavenger Hunt is returning this July. From July 1 through Aug. 5, families can search for this year's chosen carrousel animal, Pete the Pirate Cat, hidden in downtown businesses. Prizes can be claimed after finding the hidden animal 10 times, 20 times, or more. Everyone who finds the animal 20 or more times will be invited to a party at the Richland Carrousel on Sunday, Aug. 14 with free carrousel rides, cookies, juice and prizes.

The Downtown Mansfield Scavenger Hunt is co-sponsored by Buckeye Imagination Museum (formerly known as Little Buckeye Children's Museum), the Richland Carrousel Park, and Imagination Childcare with special thanks to Richland Source, Destination Mansfield-Richland County, and the Mansfield/Richland County Public Library. This event is free and open to all.

In July, check out the Richland Source interactive map of downtown Mansfield (www.RichlandSource.com) showing all the downtown locations that are hiding a picture of Pirate Pete.

Pick up a paper map and checklist of businesses at Little Buckeye Children's Museum, Destination Mansfield-Richland County, Richland Carrousel Park, or the Mansfield Library.

Find Pirate Pete in the participating businesses and get your map stamped or signed.

When 10 signatures or stamps have been collected, visit Little Buckeye Children's Museum to make a sea-worthy craft.

When 20 signatures or stamps are collected visit the museum to sign up for an invite to a party at the Carrousel on Sunday, Aug. 14 at 2:30 pm. Those who collect all the signatures or stamps will be eligible for a special prize. Must be present to win prizes.

Explore downtown Mansfield and see what all it has to offer. No purchase is required to play. And it does not have to be completed all in one day, or even one weekend. There are 36 days to complete it. If a business is closed the one time you have to hunt, no big deal. Prizes will still be awarded. For more information, follow "Downtown Scavenger Hunt" on Facebook.

Killbuck Watershed Land Trust hires Emerson as executive director

Tate Emerson was hired as executive director of the Killbuck Watershed Land Trust, the area's leading land preservation and conservation organization. The move marks the first non-volunteer leadership for the organization since it began in 2001.

"We knew for years that we couldn't remain an all-volunteer organization if we wanted to grow beyond word-of-mouth," said Randy Carmel, President of the KWLT Board. "The combination of Tate's environmental knowledge and his desire to move out of the manufacturing world aligned perfectly with our timing."

Emerson brings over 20 years of professional experience in leadership roles managing complex projects and guiding cross-functional teams, where he's been able to hone his natural abilities—innovating, streamlining and problem-solving. And while the majority of his career has been in the manufacturing industry, Emerson had been searching for a more purposeful role that would integrate his personal passions with his expertise.

"I was dedicating most of my waking hours to an industry I'm not passionate about," said Emerson. "And I realized that if I didn't make a change soon, I'd likely spend the rest of my life working without feeling fulfilled."

For Emerson, who was already involved with KWLT as a volunteer board member when they voted to move forward with creating the executive director position, this opportunity is more than a career move; it's a lifelong passion and commitment recognized.

"I love connecting with local landowners and helping them preserve their property for future generations," said Emerson, who grew up on a local dairy farm that has been in his family for five generations. "I get it — my family's farm and its history is woven into my identity."

Emerson believes keeping land parcels whole and locally owned is crucial to rural Ohio as it experiences more and more urban sprawl. He says the diversity that small farms offer provides for healthier food, healthier land and healthier economies.
